FEATURED PRESENTATION – “How to manage your start up as a project”

Ahmed Zouhair

Ahmed shared the relationship with project management and managing your business as a project. The critical links of understanding management and unique leadership requirements are needed to create the outcomes leaders successfully hope to achieve for their organization and the team.

The audience participated by sharing their project management experience regarding communication during meetings, team participation, and group integration. Ahmed shared a free resource at: <https://www.startupschool.org/curriculum> and YC course guide.

Ahmed talked about finding a mentor to bounce ideas off. He provided a brief of the PMI changes to the leadership triangle. Ahmed had the audience perform an individual assessment and share their results. The assessment exercise also would be helpful in a job interview that questions the interviewer.

Ahmed had us exercise related to the image regarding perspective. What do you see? If you don't know something, you do research. Don't complicate things. Try to keep things simple to get early results. Simplicity usage takes practice.

Process

Ahmed discussed management versus leadership. Ahmed recommends the audience consider taking a design thinking course to add to our perspective thinking tool bag. Ahmed spoke about the purpose and being part of our quality of life and its human. Finally, Ahmed conversed with the audience on their purpose ideas with Dave and Gus.

Ahmed concluded his presentation with the process: He focused on design thinking, the 4D process, creating a story (branding) about what your busy is, and limiting the number of hats you are wearing. Also, he wanted us to consider the 15-second rule about what we do to share with others. He added to the process skill tools usage by considering a balanced scorecard. He added OKR or Objectives with Key Results to the conversation. Ahmed discussed communication with teams using models such as Tuckman's team development cycle, Google's high-performance team process, trust, conflict is good, and the 8 Cs of trust.
